

ECONOMICS

Head Start for Year 12 Economics (Pate's Grammar School Economics Department)

FIRST EDITION

20.4.20

A premature welcome to the world of Economics!

tutor2u

Your weekly task—go here first

A podcast for your daily lock-down exercise?

Extend your reading

Keep up to date

An introduction to Economics

tutor2u

This should be your weekly port of call. There are a series of 'head start' resources produced by tutor2u that provide an introduction to the areas of economics you will be studying once you commence the A Level in September. Please keep checking in on this site to complete the weekly lessons. The first two are an Introduction to Macroeconomics and an Introduction to Globalisation.

There are also a few extra resources below ranging from books you might like to access to podcasts you can listen to whenever suits you.

BBC—50 Things That Made The Modern Economy

Even your teachers have learnt a lot from this eclectic mix of inventions, concepts and ideas that have shaped the modern economy as we know it.

Doughnut Economics by Kate Raworth

Why not download and read a free chapter from this brilliant critique of traditional Economics written for non-Economists. Kate Raworth has written extensively for media including The Guardian, The New Statesman, Newsweek.com, and Wired.com, and has contributed to many radio programmes including for BBC Radio 4, The World Service, ABC and NPR, as well as television including CNN World News, Al-Jazeera, BBC, ITV and CBC. She has also been named as “one of the top ten tweeters on economic transformation”.

BBC News—Economy

You are not expected to know what economics is yet, but it's essential throughout your two year course to build up an awareness of what goes in the world of business and the political influences that shape economies around the world. The BBC News Economy page is a quick and easy source to dip into and learn the latest developments in markets; both domestic and foreign. We'd recommend you visit this once a week.

In summary we anticipate that as a minimum you will work through the tutor2u weekly activities but we would love to hear about all the other Economics you have been engaging with when we see you in September so please drop us an email if you wish.

Mr. D Johnson and Ms K Fey
djohnson@patesgs.org and kfey@patesgs.org
Pate's Grammar School